

Conclusion

Now, as you, the reader, can hopefully see, the events at Jonestown weren't caused by a cult of insane people. Instead, it was a tragic event that resulted in the loss of many lives. The members of Peoples Temple were people who wanted to create a change. They were brave enough to give up everything they had to try and create a new world. It is terrible that all of their kindness and love would go to waste because of the actions of a single, twisted man.

Human nature is what drove the residents of Jonestown to their end. It drove the members to move to Guyana, in the hopes of a better world. It drove the people to act out of fear and self-preservation. And it drove Jim Jones to cause the mass murder of over nine hundred people due to his corruption from power. Jonestown is not a mass suicide that can be written off and pushed into the shadows. It is an opportunity for us to see the good and the bad sides of human nature.

I hope that you will take what you have learned from this book and use it to spread the truth about Jonestown. Help us to inform the world that Jonestown was not a cult that committed mass suicide by "drinking the Kool-aid," but a group of people who wanted to create a better world under the ideas of freedom and equality. Peoples Temple was not a cult, but a group of revolutionaries who wanted to change the world.
