On December 18, 1978, [redacted]
[redacted] Santee, California, furnished the following information: (u)

In 1977, he lived in Eagan, Minnesota, and was an amateur radio operator there. Between April, 1977, and July, 1977, approximately, he occasionally heard conversations between amateur operations in Jonestown, Guayana, and the Oakland - San Francisco area, as well as between Jonestown and Los Angeles. [redacted] assumes the operators were missionaries because they talked about God and praised the Lord. The parties also talked about shipping money and supplies to Jonestown, including guns. Those in Jonestown indicated they were allowed to shoot for meat. They talked about "shooting pigs" and stated they needed heavy guns with a great deal of power because boars were hard to bring down. (u)

[redacted] stated he recently learned the People's Temple had a transmitter in Jonestown and wanted to bring the above information to the Government's attention for whatever significance, if any, it may have. (u)
