the good thing about doing medicine is that you can practice it anywhere. So you can really choose where you want to live.

I'm glad your church work is going well and you are satisfied with it. I guess you aren't playing the piano in Guyana, are you? I know the steel drum sound, and am picking up some Latin rhythms, etc., from my piano teacher, who leads a salsa band.

Well, I bet you're surprised to get this. Maybe you'll even get another one!!!

Dear Anne, Sounds like you are having a worthwhile time in Guyana and enjoying it too. The best kind of experience, right? I hope you'll be back in U.S. of A. by August, since I'll be visiting Mom + Dad then. If not, I may have to go off to Guyana to see you.

Well, by now you know I got laid off my stupid financial analysis job. I didn't like it. On the other hand, I didn't like getting canned, either. But, it just was not meant to be. I am back working part time at Circle Graphics, part-time in TELEVISIONS magazine, + part-time on starting up a little company with two other women. We have high hopes, and low capital, but things should start developing once we get ourselves organized.

Yesterday I got back from a little trip to Chincoteague, an island in Virginia where they have a wildlife refuge. We saw lots of birds and wild ponies in the marshy, swamp-land. I tried to go surfing, but it was mid-tide, and the waves didn't roll in - they just crashed on the sand. So I wiped out alot, to say the least.

Are you getting married or something? Mom mentioned a medical student you'd been seeing - she didn't think you were getting hitched? just going to live together. Are you planning to practice tropical medicine in South America or back here in the plain old South? You probably saw the way plenty of North Americans live the time you + Dad + Mom drove through the South. Owell,
