

Valentine's Day
1974

Dearest Jim,

I wanted to send you
a valentine but searched
in vain for one I could relate to. I thought of writing my deep sentimental feelings I have for you but decided that was selfish
since you might feel it required some response from you. So I decided the thing I most want you to know was:

EEHAR

1. How much I appreciate what I've learned about life by knowing you.

2. Even though I have a strong personal attachment to you, if some fate should separate us forever, I will lend what strength I have to defend the defenseless and oppressed.

3. You have been my only love and there shall never be another. I enjoyed our intimate times together and face the rest of my life, happily, just remembering those moments. I loved you before you were 'God' and will always be sentimental about those years when I thought we loved.

4. My love for you, today, wishes for your peace, rest and the fulfillment of your dream of a better world.

Happy Valentine's Day.

Marlene.
