

Father -

Sandy B. gave out my number for her work some weeks ago. (She ask me before she did so.)

Last night she called and ask if a man she works with ever has called here. I told her no.

She said this man keeps calling the office number (7600) for her, and she has given him the new number.

She went on to say I have answered the phone each time he called. She thought she should tell him it was one of our recreational projects area there, so he would not wonder why she was there.

It seemed out of Character for her to call me, and she almost seemed over concerned about it. (Almost like she was trying to excuse herself for him still calling the office number.)

Now! Today a call comes to the office for Patricia Castmel I & gave name & phone number to S.F. already.)

Maybe no connections but pass it on for consideration. -

I would see no reason for her to tell me of the calls (if she answered them all)

She seemed to be worried he would call when she wasn't there.

Almost like if she was trying to explain something away — unusual for her to call me —

Probably nothing, I felt in easy about it —

P.S. Rather tell you and be wrong, than be afraid of being wrong & say nothing.

P.S. — She said last wk. or so "They say it is better to have loved and lost than to have never loved at all"

She said "I wished I had never loved at all." She has seemed upset to me ever since she said this to me.

Re: Sandy Bradshaw

1. Wed. nite, she didn't come down to SF - She told Carol Stahl that she had to be "on call" for the job.
2. On Thursday nite, when messages came for her in RV - She wasn't there at all Thursday nite or Friday day - She didn't work on Friday either because I called her at work to give the message -
